Russian Strategy

LONDON, May 25.—Russian strategy on both fields of active war continues and commands the commendation of military critics here Russia's preponderance in strength enables it to force Turkey to fight where and where the former chooses At the same time the distance and character of the country and roads between the war theaters of the Danube and Asiatic Turkey render the Turks powerless to avail of advantages of possession of the interior lines of communication in such manner as did the Confederates in the American rebellion They cannot suddenly concentrate their forces to hurl en masse against either of the two opposing forces without giving the other corps a fatal advantage The Russians apparently have no intention to cross the lower Danube and enter the low unhealthy swampy country of the Dobrudscha Their events on that line are designed merely to cover their work of fortifying that portion of the river to guard against a flank attack from that direction by the Turks Their grand attempt to cross the Danube apparently will be between Widdin and Rutschuk If they succeed they can compel the enemy to retreat rapidly to the Balkan mountains or risk their entire fate in a great field fight on comparatively open plains, but the Russian commander evinces no haste His situation is such that he can afford to wait if necessary, holding the Turks at bay on the Danube until the Russian forces moving towards Erzeroum shall have finished the immediate campaign designed for their accomplishment

AN EXHAUSTIVE POLITICAL REVIEW.

Senator Morton's Letter.

INDIANAPOLIS May 24.—The Journal publishes a letter from Senator Morton in answer to an open letter addressed to him through the New York Times some weeks ago on behalf of a large number of Southern Republicans stating their views on the political situation and asking his He says he has received many letters asking the condition of the Senatorial contest from Louisiana at the adjournment of the Senate He then says the committee on privileges and elections met soon afterwards and the Republican members unanimously reported that prima facie S B Packard was the lawful Governor of Louisiana, that the legislature was the lawful legislature and that Wm P Kellogg had been elected in conformity to the act of Congress and was entitled to be sworn in and take his seat As a number of members of the Senate were absent and the subject would lead to a long debate and there was a general anxiety to adjourn, the report was not laid before the Senate If a majority of the Senate shall at the next session be of the opinion that Kellogg was lawfully elected as the legislature of Louisiana he will be entitled to his seat notwithstanding the events that have since occurred No subsequent breaking up of the legislature, combination or arrangement can affect in title or destroy the legality of what took place at the time, though the very members who proclaimed the election of Packard and made that of Kellogg should subsequently declare that of Nicholls and take part in the election of Spofford It is too clear for argument They could not take away a right which had vested or make that unlawful which had been before lawful, Unless Kellogg voluntarily withdraws, the Senate will have to decide the question of his election as it stood at the time of adjournment. The Republican governments of Louisiana and South Carolina have yielded to force. They have gone down before armed minority whose threats of future violence were guaranteed by a long train of bloody deeds in the past I regret that the real character of the transaction should be obscured in the least by the pretended investigations or negotiations Stripped of all disguises and pretences, the simple fact is that Packard and Chamberlain were not able to maintain themselves in authority, and the governments of the United States, in the exercise of its discretion, refused them the United States support Their legislatures, finding themselves defenseless, fell to pieces, and from their ruins in part new legislatures have been constructed whose legality consists only in the fact that they exist and there are none to oppose them. The administration decided that such a case of insurrection and violence was not presented as authorized the national government to intervene, and that the contending parties, it was apparent, worked out through the pieces of the commission and seemed to take the form of a negotiation Assurances were given that the rights of all classes should be protected and the government administered for the equal benefit of all. General promises of this kind amount to little, especially when left to the voluntary execution of a party which believes that the colored man ought not to have political rights, or even personal freedom, and who have never considered him a par of the people President Hayes was urged to give up Louisiana and South Carolina at once, and was told it was only a question of time, that at the next election they would go as Mississippi, Alabama and other States had, and it would be better to give them up at once However repulsive this argument, it was unfortunately too true The same crimes and violence which had wrenched Mississippi and Alabama from the Republican party, and had so entirely captured Louisiana and South Carolina, would certainly succeed the next time This was an argument of expediency not of right and justice President Hayes has accepted the situation as it was bequeathed to him on the 4th of March Republican government in Louisiana and South Carolina could only be kept in place by the army nor would it have been in the power of the President to maintain them by the army with a Democratic House of Representatives which recently withheld appropriations for the support of the army except on the condition that it should not be used in the South ern States It was clearly unconstitutional to put such a condition into the bill, but it did and was likely to do it again at the extra session, thus made necessary. The majority of the House made up of Southern Democrats, late Confederates and desperately earnest, and of Northern Democrats wholly subservient, thus threatened the existence of he army and had in their power to destroy it The question was, should the President yield to the inevitable defeat While in my judgment it was clearly the right of the President under the constitution to recognize the Packard government and support it by military power, the undertaking would have been futile and the failure disastrous. With a divided public opinion in his own party and both houses of Congress against him he would have failed in the end I do not believe that President Hayes intends to desert or destroy the Republican party and attempt the creation of a new one upon its ruins I believe in his patriotism and high integrity, and in his undivided purpose to make his administration a beneficence to his country The language of his inaugural was strong, and the declaration of his devotion to the great doctrines of human rights which constitute the foundation of the Republican party, left nothing to be added or desired The centennial of national affairs under circumstances of extraordinary difficulty which, when the minds of men were greatly divided as to what should be done, while all were agreed that something should be done and that things could not long go on as they were he marked out his course and addressed himself to it with undaunted courage Mr Hayes was selected as a Republican, and I believe will be a Republican President, not in the mere partisan way, but in the sense of devotion to Republican principles and in the maintenance of the Republican organization by placing political power in the hands of worthy and qualified Republicans Political principles do not now execute themselves They require a party to do that. We hear it said that the Republican system of reconstruction was a failure The system is be true one and the principles upon which it is based just and unalterable and the only sense in which it has failed is that it has been resisted by armed and murderous organizations, by terrorism and persecution the most cruel and wicked of the age and if Democratic assurances to President Hayes in Louisiana and elsewhere of protection and equal rights are executed in good faith, the system will not be a failure but a grand success extorted from its enemies Let it be understood the great purpose of the Southern people is to recover from the losses inflicted by the rebellion They do not now think of leaving the Union, they are not now preparing schemes for future secession but they are with intent earnestness revolving plans for recovering from their great losses For this purpose they will support the Democratic party of the North as long as it is subservient to their policy, notwithstanding their ill suppressed resentment for its influence in getting them into the rebellion, as his sneaking and cowardly course while it lasted We are told there will be quiet in those States when Democratic rule is established Very likely, when they have gained complete power and the Republican party has ceased to struggle there will be no more discontent to shoot men down because of their politics There will be peace when there is subject submission In the Line House the dividing line between loyal and rebel claims was obliterated and in a single Democratic administration would be obliterated The destruction of the Republican party would make the Democratic party supreme and fasten upon he country its odious policy and principle The men who directed the bloody crusades in the South for the last ten years that have now culminated in final victory in South Carolina and Louisiana are still living and have lost none of their power The men who within seven years have wielded the Democratic party in solid column North and South against the fifteenth amendment are still in the ascendency. In any man weak enough to believe that they or a majority of them have been soundly converted and are honest advocates of the equal rights of men It is my opinion that the body of the Southern Democracy have not changed in regard to the civil and political rights of the negro and if Tilden had been elected President with his term of four years, the 14th and 15th amendments would have been substantially overthrown in most of the Southern States This would have been accomplished by methods recently illustrated in Mississippi and other States and is altogether possible to that requisite political genius which can extract a Democratic majority of sixty thousand from a Republican majority of thirty No one prays for conciliation and fraternity between the North and South more earnestly than myself, but conciliation and fraternity to be honorable and durable must be based upon the concession of equal, civil and political rights, peace and protection to men of all races and creeds If the man who held the colored people in bondage, and who at every step since the war, and until yesterday, fought against civil rights and the constitutional amendments are to-day regenerated and will now administer the great principles asserted by the Republican party and placed by it in the constitution and laws, it is a consummation devoutly to be wished. Such a frame of mind on the part of the Southern people I should regard as the most important and deliberate of all political conditions, a grand result which every patriot has at heart, but if I do not believe in this sudden conversion, I ought not to be considered incredulous and prejudiced. In Georgia, Texas, Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas, part of Missouri and Middle and Western Tennessee free suffrage exists chiefly in name The voluminous testimony taken by the Senate committee establishes the fact that the liberty enjoyed by Republicans, both white and black, was but nominal They were outcasts from society, oppressed in business, hunted like criminals and denied the protection of the laws If South Carolina, with a Republican majority of 25,000 and Louisiana, with a like majority of 15,000, are to be calmed and pacified in the same way, the hope and promises held out to President Hayes will have been broken in every part. If, on the contrary, Republicans of these States, white and black, shall be protected in person and property, freedom of speech, action and occupation, I shall be the first to acknowledge the grand result. I will ignore the past, let by-gones be by gones, accept he new conditions with joy, and believe that he rebellion was not suppressed in vain. It is to this happy condition that President Hayes aspires, and all should earnest

THE WAR AND AMERICAN OPINION.

A timely article in the Nation discusses "American Opinion on the War in the East." In its criticism of the Turk it is in the spirit and vein of Freeman's famous essay. It shows why the Ottoman power should not have the sympathy of America. In Europe discussion of the subject is usually warped a good deal by selfish opinion. Influences of this sort prevail especially in England among those who are connected with the government and with commercial affairs. But in America there may be impartial opinion. The Nation therefore observes with regret that a portion of our press appears to sympathize with the Turk only because he is the weaker party. On this theory, it says, "a bad fellow who, being found out and compelled to disgorge and reform, puts his back to the wall and makes a vigorous resistance, thereby not only atones for his sins, but is left with a balance of virtue which entitles him to our pity and applause." This is a very proper protest against a common habit of admiring a ruffian because he makes a sturdy fight, in which, however, he is likely to be overpowered. It is the jealousy of Christian nations towards each other that alone has enabled the Turk to maintain a system that outrages civilization. America should be the last to sympathize with it.

The criticism proceeds to deal also with the assertion that Russian rule is no better than that of the Turk. As a matter of fact, the Russian political system, for two hundred years, "has been a civilizing agent of extraordinary effectiveness." During the reign of the present Emperor the improvement has been especially manifest. Serfdom has been abolished. Protection of the laws is extended over all. The power of the government is, indeed, in a certain sense despotic; but "no one in our time, even in Poland, has had anything to dread from the Russian government if he avoided politics and obeyed the law." Contrasted with this, the condition of the subjugated population of Turkey, comprising four-fifths of the inhabitants, who are exposed constantly to spoliation, outrage and massacre at the hands of an armed caste of semi-barbarians, is a spectacle that ought to move the whole heart of humanity.

Russia, therefore, is commended for "going right at the oppressor's throat and bidding him beg for quarter." All authorities agree that the Turkish government is simply a rule of brigandage, and that without method, order, regularity, or organization.

POLITICAL POINTS.

Political news from the East is of much interest. Senator Morton's letter is very forcible. It goes to the very marrow of present politics. His treatment of Southern affairs is, in the light of recent events, the bitterness of truth. At the same time it is fairly shown that the course of the President could not have been different. He has not deliberately chosen that matters shall be as they are, but has been controlled to a great extent by causes antedating his acceptance of the executive office. Time was when this account of Southern violence, as presented by Mr. Morton, would not have been credited; but proofs accumulate showing that the description is not an exaggerated one. When it is confessed by the Governor of Mississippi that no jury can be obtained to punish the Chisholm murderers, what more need be said? All disguise is torn off, and we have the hideous truth, repulsive in its nakedness and enormity.

An effort to organize a new national party is reported. Senator Blaine, it will be supposed, is the central figure; but he is an astute politician, and his part in the matter is likely to be very much exaggerated. Let who will be at the bottom of it, it is a foolish project. A new party cannot be created in a manner like this. It will not leap full-armed from the brain of political managers who have little to complain of, except that the offices have not been distributed to their liking. The burden of the talk in the council was office. It is too narrow a basis for a great party to stand on. The fiat of politicians never creates a party. If it have not a broad purpose to build on, it never meets with success. The present effort is exceedingly unpromising. The idea of treating the administration as hostile to the interests of the Republican party cannot be maintained, because it is not backed by the better sense of Republicanism.

THE MISSISSIPPI HORROR.

It was Chicago Tribune's correspondence—not that of the New York Tribune—which asserted that the Chisholm family was murdered by a band that "controls the politics, lives, labor and votes of Mississippi," and that the Governor of the State would do nothing. But here is what the New York Tribune's correspondence says on the subject. The testimony appears to be thoroughly impartial and adds further proof as to the condition of things in the Southern States. The writer, E. V. Smalley, is one of the Tribune's best known and most trusted correspondents:

In my conversations with the county officers and others of the principal citizens of the place, I have been shocked to find them all more desirous of excusing or palliating the horrible crimes of the mob than to exhibit sympathy for the victims. From not a single man have I heard expressed an intention to aid in bringing the murderers to justice, or even the hope that they will be arrested. A portion of the community entirely sympathizes with the perpetrators of the bloody outrage, and those who do not are too much terrorized to try to enforce the law.

I wish I could say that politics had nothing to do with the terrible affair, but I cannot, in face of the facts that the assailants were all Democrats and the victims Republicans, and in view of the bitter feeling against Chisholm and Gilmer that had pervaded the county for years. Still it was by no means a purely political outrage. The personal feud between Chisholm and his adherents and the Gully family had roots outside of party differences, and the Gullys, no doubt, believed that Chisholm and Gilmer had instigated the assassination of the kinsman, who was chief of their class. After all, the principal cause, underlying all others, must be a low grade of civilization—a condition of society in which the laws are not respected, the sacredness of human life not appreciated, and in which personal grievances are often avenged by cowardly murder, and political quarrels are held by an ill-educated public opinion to palliate if not to justify the shedding of blood.

The Nation, in discussing the tragedy, holds that it was not altogether political, but saves this point at the expense of the civilization of the South. It says:

No "troops" could hinder affairs like this Chisholm tragedy in Mississippi, and no policy of government can at once put an end to them. They do not arise from any special feeling of hostility toward the negro, and political animosity is only one element, and frequently not the chief one, creating them. They are a result, as we have more than once pointed out, of a social condition, which must be gradually changed, which cannot be abolished by either military government or legislative measures. For a generation to come, but with lessened frequency, outbreaks of a similar character may be looked for.

Mr. Gales' notes of Webster's reply to Hayne, and the written report, with Webster's own revisions, are to be given to the Boston Public Library.

A DANGER NOTED.

William Allen, ex-governor of Ohio, has been speaking his mind on the proposed subsidy for the Texas Pacific railroad and on collateral schemes. Among other things he said

It is a matter of regret to notice that some Democrats are manifesting a disposition to go after strange gods. There was a railroad convention some months since at St. Louis, called in the interest of the Texas Pacific. Lamar and other leading Southern men were there advocating this scheme. It does not mean simply one great line connecting our widely separated seaboards. It means a dozen collateral roads with grants and raids upon the Treasury. It means demoralization and its attending evils. When I was in Congress Democrats knew such a thing as principle. When Jackson vetoed the Maysville pike project, he laid down a great principle, to which the Democracy became wedded, and from which it should never swerve. Everybody seems anxious to break into the United States Treasury.

And much more to the same purpose. The change referred to in the policy of the speaker's party is quite as radical as he states it. A solid South will now come up for a grand raid on the Treasury. Says the New York Times:

The Texas Pacific road will be the test case. If that job be successful, there is no scheme of swindling too flagrant to be beyond hope. Between incessant partisan warfare, with all its hindrances to business, public or private, and colossal demands upon the Treasury, with their inevitable effect upon taxation and the public credit, we have not much room for choice.

Little incidents are occurring continually to grieve those philosophers who think we have thirty-eight separate nations, each possessed of all the rights of sovereignty and independence. In their opinion all authority exercised by the United States is usurpation, and they are unhappy every time they witness its exercise. Even the smallest intimation that there is a government of the United States, though attended by no show of power or use of authority, inflames the noble rage of these worshipers of 'many-headed sovereignty. When the President talks of measures for the welfare of the people and suggests that murder is not a legitimate instrument of party politics, he is denounced as a despot who tramples on State rights. The "empire" man is convinced that it is quite as wrong for the government to discountenance the violence that deprives citizens of their legal rights and of life itself as it was for the same authority to take a stand against that supreme exercise of State rights—secession.

NEWSPAPER OPINIONS.

Salem Mercury: Right, justice and law are with Hayes so far as his Southern policy is concerned, while Republicanism of the last decade is with the Blaine wing of the disorganized party.

Oregon City Enterprise: Making concessions to the Democracy is very much like playing with a healthy tiger, and we never knew the Democracy to get any power that it did not make bad use of.

Olympia Courier: By-and-by it will be necessary, in the interests of civil service reform, to adopt a regulation that no Federal official's resignation shall be valid unless duly sworn to and acknowledged before some competent officer.

Salem Statesman: Our choice would not have been Key, for Postmaster General; neither would we have appointed a Confederate to a good fat office if that Confederate was still "in the gall of bitterness and the bonds of iniquity" as are the Bourbon Democrats generally.

Corvallis Gazette: Give us this (the right to create a public debt), and we will not complain; and if the barriers we have alluded to can be removed, the day will soon be that the leading paper of our State will not need to complain of the California press directing immigration back to the East, instead of to Oregon.

GENERAL NOTES.

For the first time in the history of China, the government of that empire has issued a decree, which is published in the Pekin Gazette, which not only favors religious toleration, but makes special reference to Christian proselytism, and enjoins upon the provincial governments to favor that line of missionary labor.

The painful rumor reaches the New York Sun that Mr. Maxwell Evarts, finding his salary as Secretary of State and his income from outside professional work insufficient, is ready to accept engagements on the lecture platform, and that Mr. Schurz, for a similar reason, is arranging a series of piano recitals in the large cities of the North and West.

W. A. Goodyear, mining engineer, San Francisco, who has had many years of exceptionally valuable practical experience with the mines of California, Oregon and Washington Territory, proposes to publish, if he can obtain sufficient advance subscribers to warrant the publication of a work on "The Coal Mines of the Western Coast of the United States."

The great inflation of the circulating medium in Germany, owing to the reception of a thousand millions of dollars from France as a war indemnity, resulted the same as if the amount had been in paper, first in unparalleled activity but followed by corresponding depression, stagnations and general suffering. The reaction has been so great that some of the German philosophers are now seeking a remedy in high protective tariffs.

Every facility was extended to me by all the officers and employees of the Company to enable me to make my examination thorough. Books, papers, and accounts were freely exhibited to me. SATURDAY MORNING, MAY [illegible]

CITY.

THE KALAMA ROBBERY.—As yet [illegible] been obtained of the perpetrators of the robbery of the N. P. R. R. Co.'s safe last Tuesday night. The burglars effected entrance to the office by bursting open doors leading in from the rear. To enter the office they drilled a hole in the safe door near the knob, and by means of a crowbar succeeded in wrenching it open. They proceeded then to help themselves to the contents. There was in the safe at the time it was entered $1,950. About $1,000 was in greenbacks, $300 in silver; $300 was in greenback notes, and the remainder in gold. The burglars made a clean swoop, carrying off everything of value. Two or three Germans were sleeping in the same building, but heard nothing unusual during the night. The safe was situated near the front of the building, and the young men went up stairs some distance away from the scene of the robbery.

WILL BE SENT BACK.—The [illegible] unfortunate young women who [illegible] on the Ajax, and were saved from a life of shame and infamy through the [illegible] of Capt. Peter Mackie and several [illegible] hearted gentlemen who were on [illegible] been stopping at the "Helvers' House," [illegible] they reached Portland. The ladies, [illegible] with this very praiseworthy institution, have taken the matter in hand, and in connection with Chief Lappeus, made all necessary arrangements with the O. S. S. Co. to [illegible] girls back to their friends in San Francisco. They will leave on the outgoing steamer this morning. These young women are said to be repentant over their foolish and unwomanly conduct, and it is to be hoped that the unfortunate experience through which they have passed may not be devoid of salutary results.

NO SIGN OF WATER.—Mr. Thomas [illegible] who has general charge of the work of digging a well in St. Mary's cemetery, informs us that the parties having the contract of sinking the well have already reached a depth of about 70 feet. For all that, there is nothing but a loose sandy strata has been encountered, and not a sign of moisture has been met. It is thought that water will be found at a depth less than 100 feet. Owing to the loose character of the earth, the parties are putting in a curb as rapidly as they descend, thus avoiding all danger of accidents upon. The work is being crowded forward, and the well will be finished by Decoration Day.

LETTERS.—The following list of letters remain uncalled for at Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express office: H. M. Ames, Jo. G. W. Clark, John Delaney, Mrs. [illegible] Glass, D. L. Emerson, "Sweninger," Mrs. Clara Felton, Mrs. E. F. [illegible] French, G. H. Hard, W. H. Howe, Hyndman, Ben. F. Huffman, Geo. [illegible] son, H. J. Keith, J. J. Keinston, Jas. Thos. W. Wm. Woodward, Miss H. Wilson.

SPLENDID CONDITION.—At no time in the history of Portland has the fire [illegible] been in better or more efficient condition for service than at present. Every [illegible] nected with the department is in the best condition for service—ready at a moment's the signal to respond and to do valiant work to save property and life. The fire alarm telegraph was never in better condition. The efficient chief engineer, Mr. Lyon, and his assistants, Messrs. Holman and Hart, deserve credit for the efficient state to which the department has attained under their able and experienced management.

PETITION DENIED.—The Evening [illegible] says: "A petition was presented to the county court a few weeks since, praying for permission to establish another ferry across the Willamette river at or near the foot of Columbia street in this city. The court, in the matter under advisement, and has since announced their decision, which is to the prayer of the petitioners on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction in the matter, there being no county road leading to East Portland to the river bank."

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.—To-day was the time set for the annual picnic and excursion to Aurora, under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Society, and a most agreeable time was confidently anticipated by the members of that popular organization and their numerous friends. But the frowns of the weather clerk have proved too heavy, and regard to the comfort and pleasure of the excursionists has induced the committee to postpone the affair until brighter skies and balmier air is vouchsafed. The public will receive due notice of the time fixed upon by our Scotch friends for holding their annual picnic.

Nothing can exceed the liquid, soft and exquisitely sweet tones of the Swiss bells, or the excellence of execution by the troupe. It was received by peal upon peal of enthusiastic plaudits, and will merited just ee."

A bottle has been picked up on the beach between Cape Foulweather and Alsea river containing a letter dated May 14, 1870,—lat. 19° 45' south, long. 159° east—which would be near the Ladrones, we lower toward the farther shore of the Pacific ocean;—purporting to give an account of the wreck of the ship Mercedilis, which sailed from Hongkong two weeks previously. The vessel, the letter states, was caught in a typhoon, capsized and dismasted. Hope of saving the vessel was abandoned almost immediately; so a raft was made and all hands took to it, sixteen men all told and one woman. The ship soon went down. The writer says, "I cast this bottle into the sea hoping perhaps it may be found; as to our fate, whether we may any of us reach the islands or we may all perish by slow starvation is a question." The editor of the Salem Record has seen the letter and prints it in full. It is written on Chinese brown paper and is in possession of George Mayfield who lives near Yaquina Bay. Possibly it is genuine, but it reads to us a good deal like a canard.

His body was recovered shortly afterwards, and means tried to resuscitate him, but without avail.

CURE.

Twelve Years of Suffering.

Gentlemen—About twelve years ago, while traveling with Father Kemp's Old Folks Concert Troupe as a fine singer, I took a severe cold and was laid up at Newark, N. J. This cold brought on a severe attack of Catarrh, which I battled with every known remedy for four weeks without avail, and was finally obliged to give up a most desirable position and return home unable to sing a note. For three years afterwards I was unable to sing at all. The first attack of Catarrh had eat my nasal organs and throat so sensitive that the slightest cold would bring on a fresh attack, leaving me prostrated. In this way I continued to suffer. The last attack, the severest I ever had, was terrible. I suffered the most excruciating pain in my head, was so hoarse as to be scarcely able to speak, and coughed incessantly. I thought I was going into quick consumption, and I firmly believe that had these symptoms continued without relief they would have rendered me an easy victim. When in this distressing condition, I commenced the use of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH, very reluctantly, I confess, as I had tried all the advertised remedies without benefit. The first dose of this wonderful medicine gave me the greatest relief. It is hardly possible for one whose head aches, eyes ache, who can scarcely articulate distinctly on account of the choking accumulations in the throat, to realize how much relief I obtained from the first application of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE. Under its influence, both internal and external, I rapidly recovered, and by an occasional use of the remedy since have been entirely free from Catarrh, for the first time in twelve years.

Respectfully yours, GEO. W. HOLBROOK.

Waltham, Mass., Jan. 8, 1876.

P. S.—I purchased the Radical Cure of George H. Rogers Druggist, Rumford Building.

SANFORD'S

RADICAL CURE

For CATARRH.

HAS worked a revolution in the treatment of Catarrh; it has demonstrated beyond all doubt that this disease, even in its severest forms, is curable, and that comfort and happiness may be made to follow years of misery, years of suffering, by a persistent use of it. The method of treatment originated by Dr. Sanford, viz., the local and constitutional, by a remedy prepared by distillation, is the only one ever offered to the public that will bear the test of time.

Sanford's Radical Cure

is Prepared by Distillation.

EVERY plant and herb that yields its medical essence to it is placed in an improved still and there mingled with a solvent liquid, which, by heat, is made to pass over into the receiver, bearing with it the healing essences or juices of these plants or herbs, free from every contamination, pure and odorless. Thus the active medical constituents of thousands of pounds of herbs may be condensed into a very small compass. In this way SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE is divested of all the nauseating, worthless features of all other remedies, while its curative properties are increased tenfold. It is positively the greatest medical triumph of the age.

Each package contains Dr. Sanford's Improved Inhaling Tube, with full directions for use in all cases. Price, $1.00. For sale by all wholesale and retail druggists throughout the United States. WEEKS & POTTER, General Agents and Wholesale Druggists, Boston.

"A Wonderful Remedy."

Messrs. Weeks & Potter: Gentlemen—Your COLLINS' VOLTAIC PLASTER is a wonderful remedy. SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 26, 1877.

TWO LITTLE PAIRS OF BOOTS.

Two little pairs of boots, to night,
Before the fire are drying;
Two little pairs of tired feet
In a trundle bed are lying;
The tracks they left upon the floor
Make me feel much like sighing.

Those little boots with copper toes
They run the livelong day;
And oftentimes I almost wish
That they were miles away,
So tired I am to hear so oft
Their heavy tramp at play.

They walk about the new ploughed ground,
Where mud in plenty lies;
They roll it up in marbles round
And bake it into pies;
And then at night upon the floor
In every shape it dries.

To day I was disposed to scold;
But when I see at night
Those little boots before the fire,
With copper toes so bright,
I think how sad my heart would be
To put them out of sight.

For in the trunk up stairs I've laid
Two socks of white and blue;
If called to put those boots away,
O God! what should I do?
I mourn that there are not, to-night,
Three pairs instead of two.

AN INTERLOPER.

"The big boss," as the old apple woman calls him, stopped a moment as he passed through our office. Everybody was wondrously industrious at that moment.

"A young woman would take the place left vacant in this establishment by the death of Edwards," he said, in his usual abrupt manner, at the same time looking at nothing and seeing everything. "She will be here to-morrow, and I've no doubt will perform the duties required of her in a satisfactory manner. Good afternoon."

We looked at each other in surprise, and Thrall just stopped himself on the verge of a whistle, and coughed instead; but not a word did we say until we were sure that our head had reached the street, for the ears pertaining to our head are exceedingly sharp.

Then burst forth a torrent of words.

"A girl! what a nuisance!" said Smith.

"Alas! my melodious voice is silenced forever," said Thrall, who was great in opera burlesque, at the same time, with appropriate gestures of despair bursting into "Isnfelice."

"What possessed Lawrence? Such an old fogy as he is, too. I can't understand it at all," said Marlowe.

"Got her at half the salary he paid Edwards," drawled Jule Gerard, a young fellow disliked by most of us for his uppish airs, and chaffed unmercifully behind his back for his immense belief in himself and the Gerard family.

"And dear at that price, in my opinion. A chit of a girl, smart at her sums; gold medal for mathematics at What's-it's-name Institute, and consequently highly eligible for any position anywhere," said Thrall, flinging his hat across the room, and singing some ridiculous words of his own to an air from "Somnambula."

"Do be quiet a moment, Thrall," I interrupted; but he never heeded me, but went on until the very last note was reached, and then politely requested me to proceed.

"Lawrence didn't say a girl; he said a young woman, and that may mean anything in pullbacks from sixteen to sixty. Anyhow, as Smith says, she'll be a nuisance. Why don't she scalp, or paint, or claw, or engrave, or something of that sort, at undisturbed in the privacy of her own dear little studio? Or, better yet, why don't she marry somebody?"

"Marry her yourself, Dickson and prove a benefactor to mankind in general and your fellow-clerks in particular," suggested Smith.

"Oh! I say," drawled Gerard; "life's too short to be wasted talking about a woman. Let's go round and get some beer" (he called it "be-ah,") "and drink death to all interlopers." We went.

I am Dickson, the young man who was kindly advised to marry the girl book-keeper, a proposal from which I shrank, having a horror of women who usurped, as I thought, the positions and privileges o' the strener sex.

However, I will admit I had a fair share of curiosity about the new comer, and so no doubt had my companions, always excepting Jule Gerard, who was too selfish and indolent to feel the slightest interest in anything or any body. And the next morning, when a young woman pushed open the swinging door, walked up to me, I being nearest the door, and said to me in a low, shy voice (I like low, shy voices), "Will you please show me where my desk is?" I am conscious I regarded her with a look more keen than polite.

The blood rose to her cheek, and she returned my look, not boldly, but unflinchingly.

"Certainly," said I, and escorted her to her seat, catching a fearful grimace from Thrall as I passed.

The girl (for she was a girl, about eighteen, I should think) was, in my opinion—an opinion shared by all my fellow-clerks, as I found before the day was over—not at all pretty, not even good-looking.

She was tall and thin; had large sunken gray eyes, a wide brow, left bare by the plain arrangement of her hair, which was all drawn away from it and carelessly twined in a heavy coil at the back of her head, rather ugly nose, and rather pretty mouth.

She blushed nicely, the delicate crimson just tinging her pale cheeks and touching her chin; and she had beautiful hands, with long taper fingers—I noticed them when she began to write—and her name, as I afterward discovered, was Stella Starsun.

Miss Starsun proved so quiet and mouse-like that after a few days we almost forgot her presence, and chaffed, laughed, and sung, when the cat was away, almost as much as ever.

One thing we all noticed—Miss Starsun never went out at lunch time. She nibbled away at something for about five minutes, drank a glass of water, and then taking a book from her sachel, read or studied until time for work again.

"Fellows," said Smith, one day, after she had gone, "I've found out what Miss Starsun lunches on."

"Pickles," said Thrall.

"Candy," drawled Gerard.

"Two crackers," said Smith; "neither more or less. I've watched her for a week through a little peep-ho e I've made in my screen, and that's all, upon honor."

"Poor thing!" said I; "that's dry fare."

"Not so bad," drawled Jule. "Some unfortunate people haven't two crackers."

"Good heavens! what a tortoise you are, Gerard," said Thrall.

"Ya-as," said Jule.

The next day I noticed on Miss Starsun's desk a pretty basket of strawberries, in wreathed with bright green leaves. She looked at it in evident wonder for a moment when she entered, and then set it aside; but I was glad to see that at lunch time she ate the strawberries with her crackers, taking what the gods apparently had sent her, in her usual quiet manner, without question.

After that every day throughout the summer, some fruit-offering was laid upon Miss Starsun's desk; placed there by order of old Lawrence, we all decided, whose poor relation we had long ago made up our minds the girl must be.

Gradually we became quite interested in the interloper—she was so patient, so thoroughly womanly and modest in all her ways, and worked so conscientiously and well.

"Only inconvenient to have around," Thrall said, "when a fellow feels as though he must swear or burst." And if she had only been pretty, half a dozen of us would have been in love with her, as I said to Elizabeth Wayland, authoress, who had come in to see the editor of one of our numerous publications and, he being out, stopped a moment to chat with me. By-the-bye, those who say all women writers are ugly, should see Elizabeth Wayland. It is a pleasure to look at her bright, attractive face—and such a delicious, charming, harmless flirt as she is!

"'Pretty,' Mr. Dickson," said she. "Where are your eyes?"

"Where they always are when you are present," I replied.

"Take them away immediately, and look at that girl. Nice head, nice broad brow, nice brown hair, sweet gray eyes, long dark lashes, pretty little mouth, and characteristic nose—"

"'Nice' way of saying ugly," interrupted I.

"And altogether," continued Elizabeth Wayland, "a refined, lovely face."

And so it was.

She had been with us three months now, and her cheeks had filled out and were tinged with a faint pink hue; her eyes no longer looked sunken; her brow was shaded by some pretty tendril-like curls, and a happy smile lingered about her lips.

"Well, stupid?" said Elizabeth Wayland.

"Yes, ma'am," said I.

And from that day I began to fall in love with Miss Starsun. I helped her all I could with her work, which was not much, as she understood her business almost as well as I did. I bored the fellows in the other publishing houses for all their new books, that might lend them to her. Now and then I left a little bouquet on her desk, and at last I got to exchanging a dozen or so sentences a day with her.

She had a sweet low voice, as I have said before, and a pretty way, which I have not said before, of glancing up at you from under her long dark lashes, which liked me much.

Well, the long and short of it was that Miss Starsun had been my fellow-clerk only four months when I was desperately in love with her, and only waited a favorable opportunity to tell her so.

It came. Some of our fellows were on their summer vacation, the rest had been summoned to the room of the chief. I would be alone with Miss Starsun for an hour.

I approached her desk, my heart beating violently, and leaned over her. She laid down her pen and looked wonderingly up in my face.

"Miss Starsun—dear Miss Starsun, I stammered, "you have a woman's tact and intuition; you cannot have failed to see that I—"

"Have ceased to regard you as a 'nuisance,'" drawled Jule Gerard, who had silently approached from behind and secured the taper fingers I was about to clasp, "and I, Stella, my love, as an interloper. And now put on your hat, say good-by to Dickson, and invite him, if you choose, to call upon us when we return from our wedding tour.—Tata, old boy!"—Bazar.

THE PAPYROGRAPH

IS AN EXTRAORDINARY INVENTION FOR printing copies by the thousands from a single autograph writing or drawing. From one writing by this process a thousand permanent fac similes impressions of circulars, price lists, specifications, examination papers, assessment notices, etc., may be printed in an ordinary copying press, upon any description of paper. Copies may be taken direct from the writing without any of the usual operations of inking, rolling, transferring or typesetting. A proof impression may be produced within five minutes after a manuscript has been completed and be afterwards multiplied at the rate of five hundred an hour, at an infinitesimal cost.

One Thousand Copies

May be produced from a single sheet of Papyrograph Paper, and a single application of color, at an expense of four cents. It possesses over printing the advantages of an Autograph Letter, besides admitting of Illustrations without the expense of wood cuts. It allows autograph letters to pass through the mail as third class matter. It is invaluable to any business. It can be seen in operation at the office of the agent for Oregon,

WONDERFUL SUCCESS
OF
DR. PAUL M. BRENAN

In the Treatment of Chronic Disease.

Positive Proof of his Wonderful Skill.

Testimony that Cannot be Contradicted.

Reliable Witnesses Testifying What he has Done for Them.

Perfect Cures where all other Treatment had Failed.

Crowds Coming from all Parts of the Country to Visit Him.

The Following Certificates Speak for Themselves:

TO DR. PAUL M. BRENAN—

For the past year and a half I have been suffering from Nervous and General Debility, Kidney Disease, Loss of Flesh and Strength, dizziness in the head and a constant pain through the back and loins. I became so debilitated and broken down that I was unfitted for business. I have been to Victoria and all over the coast under medical treatment for the past nine months, without receiving any benefit whatever, and had almost given up hopes of ever recovering, until I came under your treatment, about seven weeks ago. From the very first your treatment seemed to work like a charm, and I constantly improved from the beginning. I have gained 14 pounds of flesh, and I am now, thanks to your skillful treatment, perfectly well, and am able to return to my business on the 8nst omish. JAMES KING.
Seattle, March 31, 1877.

To the People: I have been troubled with chronic Nasal Catarrh for years, the disease being so aggravated that there was constantly an effusion of matter passing down into my throat behind the palate and down through my nostrils.

My nose became depressed between the eyes and swollen on each side. I was told by physicians that it was a polypus; that some of the blood vessels were involved and that the removal would endanger my life by hemorrhage. I became so bad that I made up my mind that I must have immediate rel ef or die.

As a last resort I applied to Dr. Paul M. Brenan, who, after a moment's examination, determined what to do. He said the nasal bone was involved and diseased, and that there would have to be a portion of it removed. He at once removed the bone tumor containing the ulcer; also the diseased portion of bone and pituitary gland and cured the catarrh. I am now perfectly well and as free from disease as ever I was in my life.
THOMAS D. MURPHY.
Seattle, April 5th, 1877.

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN—Dear Sir: I take great pleasure in stating for the benefit of those who are afflicted with any chronic disease, that I am now a well man. For the past two years I have been under the medical treatment of different physicians, from which I have received no benefit. I have been suffering with general and nervous debility, a difficulty in my stomach, and at times dizziness and severe headache, almost incapacitating me for work. About three weeks ago I put myself under your care, and I can say with delight that I am cured and feel like myself again, after having partaken of your skillful treatment. To me now, labor seems a pleasure. I say this much, hoping it will be the means of attracting the suffering to you who can rel eve and cure them.
Your's Truly, JOHN BALLARD,
Employed at Colman's Saw Mill, Seattle.

I will not publish any cures performed by me unless by the full consent of the parties.

SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 26, 1877.

TWO LITTLE PAIRS OF BOOTS.

Two little pairs of boots, to night,
Before the fire are drying;
Two little pairs of tired feet
In a trundle bed are lying;
The tracks they left upon the floor
Make me feel much like sighing.

Those little boots with copper toes
They run the livelong day;
And oftentimes I almost wish
That they were miles away,
So tired I am to hear so oft
Their heavy tramp at play.

They walk about the new-ploughed ground,
Where mud in plenty lies;
They roll it up in marbles round
And bake it into pies;
And then at night upon the floor
In every shape it dries.

To day I was disposed to scold:
But when I see at night
Those little boots before the fire,
With copper toes so bright,
I think how sad my heart would be
To put them out of sight.

For in the trunk up stairs I've laid
Two socks of white and blue;
If called to put those boots away,
O God! what should I do?
I mourn that there are not, to-night,
Three pairs instead of two.

AN INTERLOPER.

"The big boss," as the old apple woman calls him, stopped a moment as he passed through our office. Everybody was wondrously industrious at that moment.

"A young woman would take the place left vacant in this establishment by the death of Edwards," he said, in his usual abrupt manner, at the same time looking at nothing and seeing everything. "She will be here to-morrow, and I've no doubt will perform the duties required of her in a satisfactory manner. Good afternoon."

We looked at each other in surprise, and Thrall just stopped himself on the verge of a whistle, and coughed instead; but not a word did we say until we were sure that our head had reached the street, for the ears pertaining to ours had are exceedingly sharp.

Then burst forth a torrent of words.

"A girl! what a nuisance!" said Smith.

"Alas! my melodious voice is silenced forever," said Thrall, who was great in opera burlesque, at the same time, with appropriate gestures of despair bursting into "Infelice."

"What possessed Lawrence? Such an old fogy as he is, too. I can't understand it at all," said Marlowe.

"Got her at half the salary he paid Edwards," drawled Jule Gerard, a young fellow disliked by most of us for his uppish airs, and chaffed unmercifully behind his back for his immense belief in himself and the Gerard family.

"And dear at that price, in my opinion. A chit of a girl, smart at her sums; gold medal for mathematics at What's-it's-name Institute, and consequently highly eligible for any position anywhere," said Thrall, flinging his hat across the room, and singing some ridiculous words of his own to an air from "Somnambula."

"Do be quiet a moment, Thrall," I interrupted; but he never heeded me, but went on until the very last note was reached, and then politely requested me to proceed.

"Lawrence didn't say a girl; he said a young woman, and that may mean anything in pullbacks from sixteen to sixty. Anyhow, as Smith says, she'll be a nuisance. Why don't she sculp, or paint, or draw, or engrave, or something of that sort, all undisturbed in the privacy of her own dear little studio? Or, better yet, why don't she marry somebody?"

"Marry her yourself, Dickson, and prove a benefactor to mankind in general and your fellow-clerks in particular," suggested Smith.

"Oh! I say," drawled Gerard; "life's too short to be wasted talking about a woman. Let's go round and get some beer" (he called it "be-ah;") "and drink death to all interlopers." We went.

I am Dickson, the young man who was kindly advised to marry the gir book-keeper, a proposal from which I shrank, having a horror of women who usurped, as I thought, the positions and privileges of the strener sex.

However, I will admit I had a fair share of curiosity about the new comer, and so no doubt had my companions, always excepting Jule Gerard, who was too selfish and indolent to feel the slightest interest in anything or any body. And the next morning, when a young woman pushed open the swinging door, walked up to me, I being nearest the door, and said to me in a low, shy voice (I like low, shy voices), "Will you please show me where my desk is?" I am conscious I regarded her with a look more keen than polite.

The blood rose to her cheek, and she returned my look, not boldly, but unflinchingly.

"Certainly," said I, and escorted her to her seat, catching a fearful grimace from Thrall as I passed.

The girl (for she was a girl, about eighteen, I should think) was, in my opinion—an opinion shared by all my fellow-clerks, as I found before the day was over—not at all pretty, not even good-looking.

She was tall and thin; had large sunken gray eyes, a wide brow, left bare by the plain arrangement of her hair, which was all drawn away from it and carelessly twined in a heavy coil at the back of her head, rather ugly nose, and rather pretty mouth.

She blushed nicely, the delicate crimson just tinging her pale cheeks and touching her chin; and she had beautiful hands, with long taper fingers—I noticed them when she began to write—and her name, as I afterward discovered, was Stella Starsun.

Miss Starsun proved so quiet and mouse-like that after a few days we almost forgot her presence, and chaffed, laughed, and sung, when the cat was away, almost as much as ever.

One thing we all noticed—Miss Starsun never went out at lunch time. She nibbled away at something for about five minutes, drank a glass of water, and then taking a book from her sachel, read or studied until time for work again.

"Fellows," said Smith, one day, after she had gone, "I've found out what Miss Starsun lunches on."

"Pickles," said Thrall.

"Candy," drawled Gerard.

"Two crackers," said Smith; "neither more or less. I've watched her for a week through a little peep-hole I've made in my screen, and that's all, 'pon honor."

"Poor thing!" said I; "that's dry fare."

"Not so bad," drawled Jule. "Some unfortunate people haven't two crackers."

"Good heavens! what a tortoise you are, Gerard," said Thrall.

"Ya-as," said Jule.

The next day I noticed on Miss Starsun's desk a pretty basket of strawberries, inwreathed with bright green leaves. She looked at it in evident wonder for a moment when she entered, and then set it aside; but I was glad to see that at lunch time she ate the strawberries with her crackers, taking what the gods apparently had sent her, in her usual quiet manner, without question.

After that every day throughout the summer, some fruit-offering was laid upon Miss Starsun's desk; placed there by order of old Lawrence, we all decided, whose poor relation we had long ago made up our minds the girl must be.

Gradually we became quite interested in the interloper—she was so patient, so thoroughly womanly and modest in all her ways, and worked so conscientiously and well.

"Only inconvenient to have around," Thrall said, "when a fellow feels as though he must swear or burst." And if she had only been pretty, half a dozen of us would have been in love with her, as I said to Elizabeth Wayland, authoress, who had come in to see the editor of one of our numerous publications and, he being out, stopped a moment to chat with me. By-the-bye, those who say all women writers are ugly, should see Elizabeth Wayland. It is a pleasure to look at her bright, attractive face—and such a delicious, charming, harmless flirt as she is!

"'Pretty,' Mr. Dickson," said she. "Where are your eyes?"

"Where they always are when you are present," I replied.

"Take them away immediately, and look at that girl. Nice head, nice broad brow, nice brown hair, sweet gray eyes, long dark lashes, pretty little mouth, and characteristic nose—"

"'Nice' way of saying ugly," interrupted I.

"And altogether," continued Elizabeth Wayland, "a refined, lovely face."

And so it was.

She had been with us three months now, and her cheeks had filled out and were tinged with a faint pink hue; her eyes no longer looked sunken; her brow was shaded by some pretty tendril-like curls, and a happy smile lingered about her lips.

"Well, stupid?" said Elizabeth Wayland.

"Yes, ma'am," said I.

And from that day I began to fall in love with Miss Starsun. I helped her all I could with her work, which was not much, as she understood her business almost as well as I did. I bored the fellows in the other publishing houses for all their new books, that I might lend them to her. Now and then I left a little bouquet on her desk, and at last I got to exchanging a dozen or so sentences a day with her.

She had a sweet low voice, as I have said before, and a pretty way, which I have not said before, of glancing up at you from under her long dark lashes, which liked me much.

Well, the long and short of it was that Miss Starsun had been my fellow-clerk only four months when I was desperately in love with her, and only waited a favorable opportunity to tell her so.

It came. Some of our fellows were on their summer vacation, the rest had been summoned to the room of the chief. I would be alone with Miss Starsun for an hour.

I approached her desk, my heart beating violently, and leaned over her. She laid down her pen and looked wonderingly up in my face.

"Miss Starsun—dear Miss Starsun, I stammered, "you have a woman's tact and intuition; you cannot have failed to see that I—"

"Have ceased to regard you as a 'nuisance,'" drawled Jule Gerard, who had silently approached from behind and secured the taper fingers I was about to clasp, "and I, Stella, my love, as an interloper. And now put on your hat, say good-by to Dickson, and invite him, if you choose, to call upon us when we return from our wedding tour.—Tableau, old boy."—Bazaar.

THE PAPYROGRAPH

IS AN EXTRAORDINARY INVENTION FOR printing copies by the thousands from a single autograph writing or drawing. From one writing by this process a thousand permanent fac similes impressions of circulars, price lists, specifications, examinat on papers, assessment notices, etc., may be printed in an ordinary copying press, upon any description of paper. Copies may be taken direct from the writing without any of the usua operations of inking, rolling, transferring or typesetting. A proof impression may be produced within five minutes after a manuscript has been completed, and be afterwards multiplied at the rate of five hundred an hour, at an infinitesimal cost.

One Thousand Copies

May be produced from a single sheet of Papyrograph Paper, and a single application of color, at an expense of four cents. It possesses over printing the advantages of an Autograph Letter, besides admitting of Illustrations without the expense of wood cuts. It allows autograph letters to pass through the mail as third class matter. It is invaluable to any business. It can be seen in operation at the office of the agent for Oregon,

Perfect Cures where all other Treatment had Failed.

Crowds Coming from all Parts of the Country to Visit Him.

The Following Certificates Speak for Themselves:

TO DR. PAUL M. BRENAN—

For the past year and a half I have been suffering from Nervous and General Debility, Kidney Disease, Loss of Flesh and Strength, dizziness in the head and a constant pain through the back and loins. I became so debilitated and broken down that I was unfitted for business. I have been to Victoria and all over the coast under medical treatment for the past nine months, without receiving any benefit whatever, and had almost given up hopes of ever recovering, until I came under your treatment, about seven weeks ago. From the very first your treatment seemed to work like a charm, and I constantly improved from the beginning. I have gained 14 pounds of flesh, and I am now, thanks to your skillful treatment, perfectly well, and am able to return to my business on the Snohomish.
JAMES KING.
Seattle, March 31, 1877.

To the People.—I have been troubled with chronic Nasal Catarrh for years, the disease being so aggravated that there was constantly an effusion of matter passing down into my throat behind the palate and down through my nostrils.

My nose became depressed between the eyes and swollen on each side. I was told by physicians that it was a polypus; that some of the blood vessels were involved and that the removal would endanger my life by hemorrhage. I became so bad that I made up my mind that I must have immediate relief or die.

As a last resort I applied to Dr. Paul M. Brenan, who, after a moment's examination, determined what to do. He said the nasal bone was involved and diseased, and that there would have to be a portion of it removed. He at once removed the bone tumor containing the ulcer; also the diseased portion of bone and paucatory gland and cured the catarrh. I am now perfectly well and as free from disease as ever I was in my life.
THOMAS D. MURPHY.
Seattle, April 5th, 1877.

DR. PAUL M BRENAN—Dear Sir: I take great pleasure in stating for the benefit of those who are afflicted with any chronic disease, that I am now a well man. For the past two years I have been under the medical treatment of different physicians, from which I have received no benefit. I have been suffering with general and nervous debility, a difficulty in my stomach, and at times dizziness and severe headache, almost incapacitating me for work. About three weeks ago I put myself under your care, and can say with delight that I am cured and feel like myself again, after having partaken of your skillful treatment. To me now, labor seems a pleasure. I say this much, hoping it will be the means of attracting the suffering to you who can relieve and cure them.
Yours Truly, JOHN BALLARD,
Employed at Colman's Saw Mill, Seattle.

I will not publish any cures performed by me unless by the full consent of the parties.
